200 BRITISH PLANES HIT NAZI COAST

Increasing Strength Of RAF Shown As Bombers Blast Ruhr Area Again

By UNITED PRESS

The Royal Air Force bombarded Germany's heavy industries in the Ruhr area and the Nazi-held coast of France for the seventh successive night in what appeared today to be one of the war's biggest air offensives in the making.

The Ruhr attack has been accompanied by raids of growing intensity upon the Calais-Boulogne area in which an estimated 200 airplanes took part from shortly before sundown until early dawn today.

The RAF offensive has not been accompanied by any notable action by the German Luftwaffe, a factor which has given rise to much speculation in Britain.

One of the biggest aerial dogfights of the year was fought over the French coast and the English Channel late yesterday and during the early evening. Some 13 German Messerschmitt fighters were reported brought down and 10 British fighters were lost. British ships patrolled the channel waters to pick up any airmen forced down in distress.

The big British offensive was matched for intensity by the battle started by Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell in the western desert.

Axis communiques claimed today that the imperial troops have been decisively defeated in the fighting around Sollum.

British reports of the encounter said "no decisive turn" has yet been reached. Both British and Axis accounts made clear that tanks were employed by both sides on an unprecedented scale.

London said that the battle was fought in temperatures so high that infantry movements were slowed down, indicating the interior of the tanks must have been almost unbearable.

REGISTRATION SCHEDULED ON JULY 1

County's Quota Seven On Thirteenth Call Early Next Month

In preparation for the second Selective Service registration, in which men who have attained their majority since the enrollment last fall will register, the county headquarters of selective service has designated six subordinate offices for registration in the county.

The registration will be taken on July 1st.

The subordinate offices are so placed that, it is the intention of the selective service board, no registrant will have need to travel more than twenty-five miles to register.

Headquarters in the county for the registration will be at the offices of the Selective Service board in the lower Fairchild building on Main Street in Placerville.

District registration offices are designated as follows:

Youngs P. O.; Fairplay postoffice; Kyburz postoffice; Pomin's resort; Bijou postoffice at Youngs resort at Lake Tahoe; and the postoffice at Georgetown.

Supplying two men in the twelfth draft call early this week, the county Selective Service Board revealed that its quota for the thirteenth call, to report about July 7, is seven men.

The two who were called to training in the twelfth call are Owen Hearold and Otis K. Norris.

Hearold, registered with the local board, had been making his home at Sacramento for some time past and reported directly at that place.

Norris, also registered with the local board, had moved to Alabama since the registration and reported in that state, with credit to the local board for his reporting.

Press reports from Washington during the week indicated that the matter has not been finally settled, but that it is probable that the men who register on July 1 throughout the nation for one year of military training will be "integrated" into the existing selective service lists.

$7,000 Tahoe Home Burned

Residence In Bijou Pines Tract, Completed Monday, Destroyed By Fire

The seven thousand dollar home in the Bijou Pines tract at Lake Tahoe, completed Monday for the James Cummings family, was destroyed by fire Monday evening attributed to spontaneous combustion.

The family had expected to occupy the home on Tuesday.

While no definite information on the subject has been received, it is presumed that the property was insured, since Mr. Cummings has announced that the home will be rebuilt.

Workmen had completed oiling the floors of the home on Monday and it is presumed that the fire started from spontaneous combustion in the cloths and rags used in the oiling.

The circumstance that the fire took place at night was a fortunate one for the flames were more readily controlled than they might have been during the day-time. As it was, an adjoining home was reported as damaged, but not seriously, by the fire.

The Forest Service equipment from Meyers Ranger Station responded to the alarm.

COUNTY RELIEF PLAN FAVORED

Many In Legislature Look Upon SRA As Cancer Upon California Politics

By A. G. THURMAN
Assemblyman, Sixth District

The 54th session of the state legislature adjourned sine die Monday evening, the senate concluding their business at 10 p. m. while the assembly adjourned at midnight after spending nearly two hours in a futile attempt to pass out a relief bill. With the upper house having adjourned, any action on the part of the assembly to pass a relief bill was an idle gesture. Its passage in the lower house after the upper house had adjourned would have served no purpose as both houses must pass upon all measures and adopt them if they are to be approved and sent to the governor.

It is unfortunte that no appropriation for relief was made. Both houses did, however, by a majority vote, pass a bill returning the administration of relief to the counties. This measure received a majority vote as above stated, in both houses. The governor, on the other hand, vetoed the bill following which the senate was unable to overrule the veto, lacking a two-thirds vote.

Substitute relief appropriation measures were introduced, all of which failed to receive a majority vote in either house.

In the matter of relief there was a considerable difference of opinion. A strong group in both houses desired to eliminate SRA entirely, declaring the SRA to be a political cancer. Instead of allocating funds for SRA, this group desired to allocate additional funds to the counties to take care of their old age and blind aid problems. The administration forces opposed this program refusing to allow SRA to be wiped off the statute books. As a result, after several days of conference, between the various groups it was impossible to arrive at an agreement.

Whether the governor will call the legislature back into special session we cannot say but unless he does some 100,000 persons will be without relief due to the fact that the relief agency has no funds to continue operations.

According to the latest figures there are 27,500 relief cases which approximates the 100,000 persons mentioned.

The return of relief to the counties would have solved the problem according to the majority of the members of both houses. The governor thought otherwise with the result no allocation whatever has been made for state relief.

Next week in our final article will give a brief resume of the legislation of interest to the people of this district which passed during the recent session.

4-H CLUBS AND FARM BUREAU PLAN CAMP

Sixth Annual Overnight Outing At Lake Tahoe To Be Held This Weekend

For the convenience of those who wish to attend and who require assistance in transporting their luggage, a truck supplied by the Forest Service will leave the P. F. G. A. fruit shed at nine o'clock Saturday morning.

It is planned that all will be in camp by two o'clock on Saturday afternoon and that the camp will be set up by three o'clock, when the weekend program will be open with swimming and games.

Ralph Waltz, assistant extension service forester, will conduct a nature study course from three-thirty until five o'clock when dinner will be served. The Farm Bureau directors have made plans to contribute the usual hot dish with coffee for the Saturday evening meal.

Fred Wessels, of Rescue, is chairman for the campfire program to be started at seven thirty o'clock, toward which the several 4-H Clubs and Farm Centers of the county each will contribute a stunt.

Sunday morning's program opens with breakfast from six until seven o'clock followed by a Flag service after which those who are interested will make a trip to the fish hatchery at Tallac, and others will spend the morning hiking or at such other diversions as may appeal to them.

JULY FOURTH AWARDS $40

Civic Committee Planning Contest In Patriotic Decorations For Holiday

A meeting of the civic committee in charge is to be called during the coming week to complete plans for a projected local contest in patriotic decoration during the July 4th holiday, in which a total of $40 in awards will be offered.

It is proposed that the contest be conducted in two divisions, half of the award money being paid in a "business house" division and half in a "residence division.

Members of the committee met Tuesday evening at the Chamber of Commerce rooms and voted tentatively to present scrolls, as well as cash awards, to winners.

The meeting to be called during the coming week will complete the preparations for the contest, announce the specific dates for the judging and name the judges for the event.

In connection with the contest, attention is being directed by those versed in Flag etiquette, to the rules governing a proper display of the Flag and to the point that the Flag is never properly draped or hung in a "fancy" manner as a decoration, bunting being used in this connection.

MOVE AGAINST ITALY SEEN AT CAPITAL

U. S. Borders Closed To Germans As Washington Freezes Axis Finances

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, (UP) — Mutual charges of treaty violation further embittered German-American relations today as President Roosevelt indicated that some move against Italy was imminent.

The capital awaited this government's formal protest to Germany against the torpedoing of the American steamer Robin Moor.

Refusing to connect that incident with any plans for arming the merchant ships, Mr. Roosevelt said yesterday that he supposed every chief of naval operations since 1918 has formulated plans for mounting guns on merchant vessels for their defense and that the navy has such plans for doing so now if it were deemed necessary.

So far as the President is concerned, he added, those plans for arming merchant vessels are in the navy safes. He said he didn't know whether congressional authorization would be needed to take such action.

In the past 96 hours the United States government has frozen German and Italian credits in the U. S., ordered the closing of German consulates and semi-official agencies and expulsion of their Nazi employes and, finally, closed American borders to departure of German nationals.

Asked at his press conference whether action would be taken against consulates and semi-official agencies of other countries, the President replied not today with emphasis on the word "today," suggesting that some move was imminent.

He refused to amplify the charges of improper and unwarranted action made against German consular and semi-official agencies officials except to say that they were of a cumulative subversive character.

The order to customs and immigration officers "to take all necessary steps to prevent any German nationals departing from the United States pending any further instructions" was explained as a move to prevent individuals secretly taking funds across the border in violation of the regulations freezing assets. It will have the effect until modified, however, of preventing German nationals from leaving the United States for any reason.

Club Council To Elect Tonight

4-H Executives Will Discuss Conservation Program For Juniors

The regular annual election of officers of the county 4-H Club Council will take place this evening at the June meeting of the council at the office of the Farm Advisor in the basement of the federal building.

Advance reports indicate there will be a strong move to re-elect E. W. Fox, of Shingle, as chairman for the new year. Mr. Fox has led the organization during the past successful year.

The council also will discuss with representatives of the Soil Conservation Service and the Agricultural Conservation Association the establishment of a Junior Conservation program in which the members of the various 4-H Clubs will have opportunity to develop club projects in conservation on their home farms.

It is felt that the opportunity to gain practical experience in soil building and other conservation practices will prove of special benefit to the farm boys and girls of the county in their later agricultural experience.

Aline Wiley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Wiley, of Camino, is reported getting along nicely following an appendicitis operation on Friday at Placerville Sanatorium.

The Sterling Lumber Company has brought suit against H. E. Anderson and others seeking to foreclose a materialmen's lien in the amount of $86.49.

Julie Hamilton, small town Southern girl, regrets her half-hearted engagement to Kenneth Terry. When he falls under the spell of Isolde Fleming, trouble-making visitor from New York, Julie is indifferent. Then, she meets Barry Caldwell, young Western rancher who has met with reverses and is hiking to New York for a radio audition. They fall in love, and she breaks her engagement to Kenneth. A little later, however, to prevent a fight between Barry and Kenneth, she desperately tells Barry she has merely been flirting with him. The next day, she tries to explain, but he goes away embittered. When she learns, a month later, that he is singing in a cafe in Atlanta, she hastily sets out for Atlanta, telling her father she is going to visit a friend. Meanwhile, her cousin, Normandy Buford, has discovered that Barry is the son of a man whom Normandy knew twenty odd years ago when he was prospecting for gold in the West.

CHAPTER XXVII

THE day Julie left for Atlanta, Normandy Buford received a letter postmarked at Phoenix, Arizona. It was waiting for him when he returned home from his office at five.

He tore it open eagerly, and read the penciled scrawl:

Dear friend Buford:

Your letter got to me here after being forwarded around from different addresses where I've been the past few years. I was glad to hear from you. It's been a long time since we threw a diamond hitch on a pack burro and went into the mountains together to prospect for gold, but I haven't forgotten. Those were the days.

Concerning the matter you asked about in your letter—no, I never went back into the Bar-X country to try and run down that vein we found. But I'd sure like to.

I hear old Grampus Caldwell is dead, but I understand there's a son that maybe we could deal with—if you really want to go into it. Let me know. It would be good to see you again.

I've got a hunch there's a fortune in gold on the Bar-X—just begging to be worked.

Faithfully yours,
Jeff Stratton.

Normandy sat with the letter in his hand for a long time. He was gazing out a window toward the west, spanning the continent in imagination—not seeing what was before his eyes, but gazing upon a vista of wind-swept plains and rugged mountains.

THE letter carried him back twenty-five years, and he was reliving that last prospecting trip he had taken, with Jeff Stratton as his partner.

After repeated failures, that trip had been partially successful. They had found a vein all right—and it had looked like a rich find—but it had been on Bar-X property.

When they had told Grampus Caldwell of their discovery, the rancher had just laughed at them. His interest lay in cattle rather than in mining, and he was dead set against having any part of his cattle range dug up on the slim chance that there might be a bit of gold there. Hence, they hadn't run the vein down.

With the passing of the years, memory of that Bar-X vein had slipped away from Normandy. But the coming of Barry Caldwell had revived it.

His letter to Jeff Stratton had been a shot in the dark. He hadn't even known whether Jeff was still alive. For that reason, he hadn't said anything about it to Julie—hadn't told her there was a chance Barry might not be as penniless as he thought he was.

Normandy sat thinking. A fortune in gold in the Bar-X mountains? It wasn't impossible. His eyes shone with mounting excitement. . . .

He rose with sudden decision, laid the open letter on a table, and went to the telephone in the hall.

He first called his secretary and told her he was going on an unexpected trip West, and might be away for a month. Next, he phoned the depot for a reservation on a westward-bound night train: and then, he sent Jeff a telegram informing him he was on his way to Phoenix.

His train would leave at eight o'clock. That didn't give him much time to pack and get ready.

He was in his bedroom, packing, when he heard light footsteps on the front porch.

Thinking it was Julie, he called, "Come on in and make yourself at home! I'll be out in a moment, with exciting news!"

The voice that answered was Isolde's, not Julie's. He frowned, wondered what the heck she wanted, and went on with his packing.

MEANWHILE, Isolde had stepped into the living room, and was moving about restlessly. She paused beside the table, tapping the polished wood nervously.

Her glance fell casually on the open letter lying there—then suddenly became intent.

A single sentence had leaped up and caught her eye:

. . . there's a fortune in gold on the Bar-X. . . .

The Bar-X! Why, that was—that was Barry Caldwell's ranch!

She leaned over the table excitedly, read the entire letter without compunction. Her eyes glittered as she stepped back swiftly, and sat down in a chair near the door.

She was looking through a magazine with pretended nonchalance when Normandy came in, carrying a bulging bag.

"Forgive me for keeping you waiting," he said, setting down the bag.

"That's quite all right," she assured him languidly.

Normandy suddenly saw the letter lying on the table. He quickly picked it up and thrust it in his pocket.

ISOLDE smiled. "Are you going away?" She arched her eyebrows at the leather bag.

"Yes—a short business trip."

"Indeed? West?" There was a little slur in Isolde's voice.

Normandy stared at her. Could she possibly have read that letter while she was waiting? He dismissed the possibility as unworthy even of Isolde.

"As it happens—yes," he replied.

"Every one seems to be leaving," Isolde said lazily. "I came over to ask if you knew that Julie hotfooted it to Atlanta this afternoon?"

Normandy was surprised, but all he said was, "Is that so?"

"Yes. She told her father she was going to visit a friend, but the cashier at the bank told Ken she drew out an immense sum in cash before leaving, and the servants say she took enough luggage to do her for a month! It seems very queer, don't you think?"

"I am not," said Normandy stiffly. "interested in hearing Julie's private affairs discussed."

Isolde shrugged and rose. "You needn't be rude. I just thought you would like to know . . ."

She went out with a spiteful smile.

Normandy stood frowning for a moment, then dismissed Isolde from his mind. Which was a mistake.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lamm and Miss Vinnie Knight spent Sunday in Woodland, where they attended a reunion of one of Yolo County's prominent old pioneer families, members of the Knight clan, at the home of Mrs. William Rehmke on East Beamer Street. Mrs. Rehmke, one of the eleven living brothers and sisters between the ages of 58 and 82 entertained approximately 90, members of three generations. The guests attended from Willows, Camino, San Francisco, Merced, Oakland, Berkeley and other parts of California. Features for the afternoon included a picnic luncheon served in the garden of the Rehmke home, followed from 2 to 4 p. m. by an open-house for friends in the community who wished to drop in and pay respects to those assembled. This is the first reunion of the family for 11 years. The first Knights came to Woodland from Iowa in 1862, traveling across the plains, and for the past 78 years Woodland has never been without a member or members of the clan among its residents. A nice crowd of the members of Gold Trail Grange went down to Rescue last Tuesday evening and visited with the Rescue Grange and all enjoyed a pleasant evening. Interesting talks were given by the members followed by coffee, sandwiches and cake.

A very nice crowd of our Coloma and Lotus people went over to the county seat last Sunday and took in the rodeo at the fair grounds in the afternoon. All report a very good show with a large attendance.

Who should drop in on us on Friday last and make us a friendly call but Mrs. Amelia Sutton, one of our native daughters, born at Lotus and a lady whom we have known since birth. Mrs. Sutton came up to Lotus from Sacramento where she has been visiting with her brother, Chas. Leonardi, for a time and on her return to her home at Winnemucca, Nevada, came to Lotus to see her sister, Mrs. Rose Hansen, calling on the writer also. Mrs. Sutton and her husband have a large wholesale farm produce house in the above city. She intends to return to Lotus again soon and in company with her sister and husband spend two weeks at her old mountain home at Onion Valley.

The weather the past week has been partly cloudy days—the warmest day so far for the month was on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week when the mercury registered 100 degrees on both days from 12 to 4 p. m. — no rain so far for the month. In June, 1939, on the 14th we had a light sprinkle of rain in the afternoon and 1940 for the month no rain at all—the present month is just like those of 1939 and 1940 past.

In the daily of last Friday being the thirteenth, no hoodoo for our deputy sheriff Euell Gray being his thirty fifth birthday we would say Euell told the truth sure he was thirty five we have known him for over forty years and he was quite a large boy then Gray told the truth he is 35 and then some.

Britain Shows Air Strength

A dispatch from the desert front by Richard D. McMillan, United Press staff correspondent with the Imperial forces, reported for the first time British troops felt they were fighting on even terms, man for man, with the Axis.

London said Turkish sources reported a German-Turkish non-aggression pact had been initialed but had not been formally signed. Ankara reported the pact had been concluded. It was said the agreement allowed Turkey to continue to abide by her obligations under the Anglo-Turkish alliance.

Wild rumors were sweeping Turkey of an imminent break between Russia and Germany. Telephone service in the Balkans was said to be generally disrupted, as is sometimes the case when a Nazi movement is about to start, but as is also the case when nothing unusual is afoot.

Another unconfirmed report, originating in Turkey, was that Marshal Sigmund Von List, German fied commander in the Bakans, had committed suicide.

"THE LONG VOYAGE HOME" STARS JOHN WAYNE IN SEA STORY

John Wayne is a big fellow—he is six feet three inches tall and tips the scales well over 200 pounds, all bone and muscle. He was headed for All-American football honors at college when a broken ankle put him on the sidelines and he got a job at a picture studio. Currently he is one of the principals in John Ford's Argosy production, "The Long Voyage Home," filmed at the Walter Wanger studios and showing today and tomorrow at the Empire Theatre.

Wayne and Ford are old friends. It was Ford who gave him his first job as a property man. While on the job Wayne broke up a scene one day by walking through a door, thinking it was finished. His career hung in the balance while Mr. Ford made up his mind whether to laugh or swear. He finally laughed. Ford went a step further—he got him the lead in Raoul Walsh's "The Big Trail," his first acting role.

After that Wayne went into the westerns and was making a fair living at it although he was known only to the Saturday morning audiences and the South American patrons until Ford intervened once more. Ford picked him for "Stagecoach" and started him on a new career. Since then he's been going great guns.

CALIFORNIA FARM PARADE

By United Press

The smartest business man is the man who keeps informed about every development in his particular field. He's the one who experiments and studies new methods. He's the man who profits by his own mistakes—and the mistakes of others.

This is especially true in agriculture.

The agriculture department has turned out 33 new publications during the last month—and most of them are free. They include reports on the latest developments in almost every field of agriculture. And that means they can help a lot of farmers save labor and time—and, most important of all, increase the incomes.

If you have some particular problems, the agriculture department probably has a pamphlet or a booklet that will help clear up the difficulty. The department is always ready to lend assistance. You can just write to the department in Washington, D. C., and mention the subject you're interested in.

If you're interested in wool, the trade expects wool consumption this year to be fully 20 per cent larger than in 1940.

This, of course, tends to keep up prices, but there have been other reasons for the strong market. The wool carry-over is expected to be small, and there's considerable uncertainty about whether shipping facilities will be available to bring much foreign wool to the United States. All of these factors have given wool producers the highest prices since 1929.

City dealers also are paying higher prices for fluid milk. Prices usually go down this time of year, but so far this month, there's been a slight rise to an average of $2.29 per hundredweight. This unusual trend is credited to higher labor costs, and increased demand.

Much of the increased demand results from government buying for shipment to Great Britain. But this hasn't reduced the cold storage supplies of major foodstuffs.

In fact, stocks of creamery butter, cheese and frozen poultry are about a third larger than average for early June. Stored stocks of meat — mostly pork — total a little less than 1,000,000 pounds that's almost one third more than was in storage a year ago. And it's 50 per cent more than normal for this time of year. Lard stocks are twice as large as usual.

Coon Goes Sightseeing

ROCHESTER, N. Y., (IP)—Pete, a 40-lb. racoon again is in the woodlands of Irondequoit after a journey through the federal building here. Pete walked into the building, uninvited, but stayed as a guest of Arthur Carpenter. Carpenter served the coon a fish dinner and then turned it over to a game protector.
